

RELATED

Publication: LexisNexis
Wednesday, December 15
2010

INDUSTRY & TOPICS

- Broadband
- Charleston, WV, USA
- Talks & Meetings
- US State Government
- Rural Communities

CONTENT

- Organizations endorse state broadband
- Citynet says Goes deliberately canceled broadband meetings
- Frontier, Citynet face off over broadband grant
- Council to hear broadband grant dispute
- Internet firms join forces: Providers worry over Verizon's influence...
- Rockefeller says U.S. on road to faster Internet
- Rockefeller says U.S. on road to faster Internet
- Rockefeller dismisses

Organizations endorse state broadband project

Published on AllBusiness.com

Share Share 0 0 Print

Dec. 15--An organization that advocates for rural people and a Charleston think tank want the West Virginia Broadband Deployment Council to endorse the state's $126 million broadband deployment project.

The Central Appalachia Regional Network and the Charleston-based West Virginia Center on Budget and Policy took the position at a press conference Tuesday, on the eve of a Broadband Deployment Council meeting.

The position further isolates Jim Martin, an outspoken critic of the way the state plans to spend federal stimulus dollars to deploy broadband.

The state has said its project will connect 1,064 community anchors like libraries and government offices. But Martin, the president and chief executive officer of Citynet, contends the project will only benefit Frontier Communications Corp.

Frontier has said it will abide by all of the federal requirements and the state's contract to fulfill the goals established by the federal government.

In March Citynet and several other telecommunications providers asked the Broadband Deployment Council to put a hold on the state's project. The council has not done so.

In September Martin asked Larry Strickling, who heads the agency that awarded the federal grant to the state, to suspend the grant. Instead, earlier this month Strickling reaffirmed his agency's support of the project. Acting Gov. Earl Ray Tomblin hailed the support and said its acknowledgement of the state's compliance "allows us to continue to move forward."

Martin and Frontier have been offered 20 minutes each at today's council meeting to explain their positions.

"We're not concerned about the spat between telecommunications companies," the Rev. James Patterson said at Tuesday's press conference at the Capitol. Patterson is a member of the executive committee of the Central Appalachia Regional Network, which is comprised of 22 organizations in six

ALLBUSINESS SLIDESHOWS

Ten Tips on Improving Employee Motivation

Your staff is the greatest asset your small business has. We present 10 ways to ensure your team is enthused, productive, and ready to give their all.

Top 10 Tips for an Effective Advertising Campaign

No matter how great your small business's product or service is, if you don't advertise, customers won't know about it. Learn how to get noticed.

10 People Who Rose from Employee to Business Owner

It takes inspiration, ambition, and elbow grease to climb the ladder from employee to business owner. Ten successful entrepreneurs tell how they did it.

5 Common Myths About Credit Scores

Many small business owners still don't know a lot about credit ratings and how they're compiled. We bust five of the most persistent myths out there.

SEE ALL SLIDESHOWS →

ALLBUSINESS VIDEO

Citynet's objections to broadband plan states.

Rockefeller dismisses Citynet's objections to broadband plan

"We're concerned about affordable, high-quality broadband," he said. "If it is going to happen, it will depend to a large degree on the Broadband Deployment Council."

Patterson noted that state law calls for the council to sunset at the end of 2011. "We would support that the council be extended at least three years and maybe be considered to be a permanent entity," he said. "That's because of the importance of broadband."

During his first term, former Gov. Joe Manchin pledged to make broadband available throughout West Virginia by 2010. It is estimated that 20 percent of West Virginia households still do not have access.

Patterson said the fact that governments and private companies plan to spend almost a half-billion dollars on broadband deployment in West Virginia over the next few years provides the state with "an unprecedented, one-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

Paul Miller, an analyst with the West Virginia Center on Budget & Policy, said the Charleston-based think tank agrees with Patterson's organization.

"We urge the Broadband Council to formally adopt the state Commerce Secretary's $126 million project," he said. Miller also said that the life of the council should be extended and he said vacant positions on the council should be filled.

In addition, Miller urged the council to fulfill a legislative mandate to write guidelines for organizations that seek funding for broadband projects and to actually deploy a project in an underserved or un-served area.

Also, Miller said the council should:

- Modify its definition of broadband to conform with the Federal Communications Commission's definition.
- Enforce requirements that state agencies file periodic reports on broadband.
- Stimulate demand for broadband through public outreach and education programs.

Miller said that over the long term, the state should create a permanent office of broadband development; provide tax credits to encourage companies to serve underserved or un-served markets; and regulate broadband like a public utility.

Retired Cabell Circuit Judge Dan O'Hanlon, who attended the press conference, identified himself as vice chancellor for technology at the Higher Education Policy Commission and as the new director of WVNET -- the state entity that provides technology services to the Legislature, public schools and universities, and other state government bodies.

"I believe your short- and long-term solutions are visionary," O'Hanlon told Patterson and Miller. "I believe you've brought the focus back to rural West Virginians and their needs."

Contact writer George Hohmann at business@dailymail.com or 304-348-4836.

To see more of the Charleston Daily Mail, or to subscribe to the newspaper, go to <http://www.dailymail.com>. Copyright (c) 2010, Charleston Daily Mail, W.Va. Distributed by McClatchy-Tribune Information Services. For more information about the content services offered by McClatchy-Tribune Information Services (MCT), visit www.mctinfoservices.com.

Share: More

Get FREE Price Quotes from Web Designers

NEW ON ALLBUSINESS

The Top 25 Home-Based Business Ideas

Ready to start a business? We present 25 ideas for interesting home businesses with growth potential.

New Credit Cards for Small Business Owners

Business credit cards are easier to obtain today, but which one is best for you?

Windows 8 Preview: Boon or Burden for Business?

Microsoft's planned update does include some business-friendly new features.

The Top Mistakes That Managers Make

Learn the most common managerial missteps in business -- and how to overcome them.

What Is Legal to Post on Your Website

Legal expert Cliff Ennico helps small business owners figure out what they legally can -- and can't -- post on their websites.

See More Videos

Find Pre-Screened Suppliers

- ▶ VoIP
- ▶ Web Designers
- ▶ Credit Card Processing
- ▶ Online Marketing
- ▶ Telemarketing
- ▶ Payroll Services

View all 100 categories

Site Map | Contact Us | FAQs | About Us | RSS Directory | Free Newsletters | Disclosure Policy | Media Kit

Copyright © 1999 - 2011 AllBusiness.com, Inc. All rights reserved. No part of this content or the data or information included therein may be reproduced, republished or redistributed without the prior written consent of AllBusiness.com. Use of this site is governed by our Copyright and Intellectual Property Policy, Terms of Use Agreement and Privacy Policy.

Copyright 2010 Charleston Newspapers

© LexisNexis 2011

LexisNexis Terms & Conditions | LexisNexis Privacy Policy Copyright © 2009 LexisNexis, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved. You may not repost, republish, reproduce, package and/or redistribute the content of this page, in whole or in part, without the written permission of the copyright holder.

Get In-Depth Company Information from Hoover's | What is in Your Company's D&B Credit Report?

View All D&B Sales & Marketing Solutions | Get Email Lists from D&B Professional Contacts | Build Mailing Lists from Zapdata | Company Profiles

Get Your D&B DUNS Number | Gain Credibility

Information and opinions on AllBusiness.com solely represent the thoughts and opinions of the authors and are not endorsed by, or reflect the beliefs of, AllBusiness.com, its parent company D&B, and its affiliates.

